Chapter 1 by Cameryn

Staring at the woman in the large sheet of glass brought many questions to my attention such as; who was she? Why did she always stare back into my eyes?

She was different than normal, she had her hair done into an updo with chocolate brown curls blessing her flawless face. Sleek black heels were her shoe of choice rather than black boots and a slim black dress to match which contrasted with her pale white skin, making her look more vampiric than anything I had ever seen.

"I'm nervous, he will be here. Won't he?" The woman and I asked, synchronised in each mouth movement and within each word.

"Of course. You both promised to go together and you will, he wouldn't miss this for the world."

An invisible voice whispered as another person came into view. An older lady hugged the woman in the glass, tears in her eyes. Converging on them both however was a strange silhouette, it was not of anything I had ever seen before; it certainly was not human either. Strange yellow eyes glowed ominously behind the two and before I could Ben call out, the creature was gone, without even gaining the attention of the two in the mirror.

Not a car,
or at least not a moving one.
And it didn't have any windows,
or at least there wasn't any light outside.
Where the am I???
God no!
Small,
cramped,
windowless,
dusty,
wooden.
I'm
in a COFFIN!
